

A large, layered rock formation, possibly a sea stack or a natural rock arch, stands prominently on a rocky beach. The rock is composed of several distinct horizontal layers of different colors and textures, ranging from dark grey to light tan. The top layer is the most prominent, with some sparse vegetation growing on it. The beach is covered in small, light-colored rocks and pebbles. In the background, there are several tall, dark green evergreen trees under a bright blue sky with scattered white clouds. The overall scene is a natural, rugged landscape.

Acts 27:12 And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phenice, and there to winter; which is an haven of Crete, and lieth toward the south west and north west.